A RECORD FOR STAGE DRIVERS

Buckeye Man Has a Record of 55,692 Miles in Three and a Half Years—Never Was Late, Lost a Mail or Missed a Day.

A short time ago there appeared in these columns an account of a remarkable record made by George Conrad of Prescott as a stage driver, and the statement was made that it was believed the record had never been equaled in the territory or on the coast. Conrad had traveled 14,000 miles in one year, using but one horse, which was in better condition at the end of the year than when Conrad commenced, and the driver had also gained twenty pounds in weight, says the Arizona Gazette.

Now comes W. H. Hawkins of Buckeye with a story of stage driving that puts the record of Conrad so far behind that it looks like a thirty-cent piece. In a letter to the Gazette today Hawkins says:

"We don't want that Prescott stage driver to get off with the belt. I have a record of my own that will lay his record to one side; so let him go way back and sit down. I drove the stage from Phoenix to Arlington, a distance of fifty-one miles, and never missed a day for three years and six months. I never was behind time, but always on time. I had six runaways, but only turned the stage over once, and no passenger ever got hurt. The high water never stopped me, and my six horses were in better condition when I quit than when I started, and I was down in the Salt and Gila valleys, where the sand at times is deep and the sun is hot. Now, just figure a little and you will see this record was never beaten by any man and I don't think ever will be. I never lost a horse and never lost the United States mail either. In one year I traveled 15,912 miles, and in the three and a half years I made 55,692 miles. These are facts, and can be proven very easily if anyone doubts the story, and it won't take long either. My weight was 138 pounds when I started driving and when I quit I weighed 122 pounds."

A Peculiar Accident
An accident in the woods near this place which recently cost young Ludwig Neussbaumer, the twenty-year-old son of Judge Neussbaumer, of Oakland, his life, is one of the most peculiar in the records of the town.

The Neussbaumers own a country home about a mile from this place, and it is the annual custom of the family to spend much of the summer season here. Young Neussbaumer was in the woods a few days ago, and James Hunter, who is a resident of this place, was also searching for game. Hunter saw a deer and, taking aim, shot and killed the animal. It was not until afterward that he found the bullet from the high-power rifle had gone through the deer's body and entered the brain of the young man. Death must have been instantaneous.

The deputy coroner was notified and came here from Reading to investigate the case. The body of young Neussbaumer was shipped to Oakland for interment.

Judge Neussbaumer is heart broken, for this is his second son to meet a violent death. The other son was drowned near Oakland a few years ago. —Castilla, Cal., correspondence Pittsburgh Post.
